

Privacy and the Role of Government

As the Government has started to play a bigger role in our lives it has had a devastating effect on our privacy and individual freedom. It has become too large and pervasive.

Below is an example of how our personal liberties are quietly being taken through the Affordable Care Act a.k.a. ObamaCare. (According to Constitutional Attorney Kent Masterson Brown "this is not a "voluntary" program.")

Maternal, Infant and Early Childhood Home Visiting Program

The federal government will set the standards for raising children and your family will be targeted for home visits by a government employee if you fall under the "high-risk" categories below:

- Families where mom is not yet 21
- Families where someone is a tobacco user
- Families where children have low student achievement, developmental delays, or disabilities
- Families with individuals who are serving or formerly served in the armed forces, including such families that have members of the armed forces who have had multiple deployments outside the United States.
- The eligible entity receiving the grant for performing the home visits is to identify the individuals to be visited and intervene so as to meet the improvement benchmarks.
 - A homeschooling family, for instance, may be subject to "intervention" in "school readiness" and "social-emotional developmental indicators."
- Intervention may be with any family for any reason

Other Alarms

In 2011, the HHS announced $224 million of your hard earned tax dollars will be given to support evidence-based home visiting programs to "help parents and children."

Part of the program will also require massive data collecting of private information including all sources of income and the amount gathered from each source.
